6. Judicial Redress

Provisions on judicial redress are contained in Act CXII of 2011 on the Right to Informational Self-Determination and Freedom of Information.

The data subject may bring legal proceedings against the controller before a court if, in their view, the controller has infringed the rules on the processing of personal data. The action may be brought — at the data subject's choice — before the court having jurisdiction in the place of their domicile or place of residence. A party that would otherwise lack legal standing may also be a party to the proceedings. The data protection authority may intervene in the proceedings in favour of the data subject.

Any person who has suffered material or non-material damage as a result of an infringement of the General Data Protection Regulation is entitled to receive compensation from the controller or the processor for the damage suffered. The controller or processor shall be exempt from liability if it proves that it bears no responsibility whatsoever for the event giving rise to the damage.

By submitting a request for a quotation, the data subject declares that they have reached the age of 18, have read the privacy notice related to the Provision of Quotations, and accept the processing and storage of their data as set out in the notices.
